In the formation of either a brilliant or rose diamond of regular proportions, so much is cut away that the weight of the polished gem is no more than half that of-the rough crystal out of which it was formed, whence the value of a cut diamond is esteemed equal to that of a similar rough diamond of twice the weight, exclusive of the value of the workmanship. The weight, and consequently the value of diamonds, is estimated in carats, 150 of which are equivalent to 240 grains or 1 oz. Troy, and the difference between the cost of one diamond and another, ceteris par tbus is as the squares of their respective weights. Thus the value of three diamonds of...
